POSITIVE DEPARTURE ?

Whatever may be the final results of the Baghdad summit conference, the real test will be in implementing them. Fourteen years and eight summit conferences have taught the Arab masses not to pin too much hope on resolutions which have often meant nothing more than the ink and paper used to write them. To wit:

The first Arab summit conference in January, 1964, was devoted to confronting Israel's attempts to divert the waters of the River Jordan and it was followed by another summit in September the same year, in Alexandria after Israel had bombed and strafed Arab construction work. In September, 1965, in Casablanca, the final statement called for a treaty of solidarity and coexistence among the Arab regimes which never amounted to much. After the June War tragedy, the summit conference in Khartoum produced the famous "no peace, no negotiations and no recognition of Israel. No sooner had the Arab leaders returned home than some of them started working against the Khartoum decisions and their efforts finally culminated in the Egyptian-Israeli negotiations. The summit conferences of Cairo in September, 1970, and Algeria in November, 1973, are best remembered as the conferences with nothing to remember hy. The summit conference in Rabat a year later (October, 1974) was more important and yielded the principle that the Palestine Liberation Organization is the sole representative of the Palestinian people. Again, the PLO status was defied and resisted before the ink of the final resolution had dried. Then there was the Cairo summit conference of October, 1976, which succeeded for a while in stopping the Lebanese civil war hut a final solution was not found and the war is still being fought intermittently.

Despite the glaring lesson of history, there remain a few perennially optimistic Arabs who insist, as they have done that this time it will be different. They point out that the negotiations are objective and constructive and that the Arab leaders are actually trying to find a viable formula for future action instead of wasting time insulting each other or indulging in meaningless and hypocritical rhetoric. The most interesting decision has been to postpone action against Egypt until (and if) it signs a peace treaty with Israel. Another meeting is scheduled in three months' time and the Arab leaders, before Sadat's snub, had hoped that they would succeed in persuading Egypt to give up the talks with Israel. This does not necessarily mean closing the door to peace. The Arab leaders have been careful in underlining their continued desire to achieve a peaceful settlement in the Middle East, but one which is bonorable and which meets the minimum demands of the Arab peoples. Arah delegations, representing the summit conference, will soon visit world capitals to explain the decisions and assure world leaders that they have not chosen the war path.

Two decisions which should be easy to implement are the Arab fund to support the confrontation states and general Arab backing for a final settlement in Lebanon. Details will be worked out in further negotiations but there should be no serious obstacles.

The average Arab does not expect that all decisions will be implemented. But he hopes that he won't be completely disappointed again. If half the decisions taken are carried out it will be a positive departure from the past.

HAJJ MABROOR

The pilgrimage to Mecca is one of Islam's fundamental pillars and it is enjoined on all Muslims who are capable of penforming it without having to suffer either extreme hardship or financial strain. Nearly a million Muslims visit Saudi Arabia every season specifically to perform this essential tenet of Islam. Another one million, Saudis and non Saudis resident here join them to create the largest Islamic gathering in the world.

This country has been honored by God in having Islam's holiest places in its land. It is a matchless privilege to be the custodians of the House of God in Mecca and the Prophet's Tomb in Medina.

Realizing the gravity of its responsibility, Saudi Arabia has risen to the occasion by sparing no effort to make the pilgrimage to Mecca as comfortable as possible. That is despite the difficulties that occur through there being two million people in the same place during so short a time.

It is not known exactly how much money has been invested in the Holy Places in Mecca, Arafat and Mina to make the pilgrimage as easy as possible. Whole mountains were razed to the ground, thousands of meters of roads huilt, existing roads demolished and widened several times over and bridges and flyovers built. The total bill must be staggering and no amount paid by pilgrims in fees or anything else can come anywhere near this enormous investment by the Kingdom for the benefit of the "guests of God."

This construction work is carried out before the arrival of the pilgrims. What goes on during the pilgrimage season is another triumph of organization and carte blanche expenditure. Manpower for various services is increased manifold. This includes police, traffic wardens, ambulance men, fire brigade personnel, doctors, nurses, postal, telephone and telegraphic staff, and numerous others who are pressed into ser-

With two million people standing, praying and eating in one small area, it is gratifying for the Saudis, as it is comforting to the pilgrims, that few serious casualties result from the monumental congestion. To those fortunate enough to be performing the pilgrimage this year we say "hajj mabroor" and to the thousands of Saudi officials who will be on duty during the pilgrimage we say the best of luck.

Corporate power in America

By Nicholas Von Hoffman WASHINGTON-

The portents are not good for those who fear the evolution of America into a oneparty, one-ideology society, as recent news item illustrates. The Gannett Company, a corporate newspaper chain of 75 newspapers and nearly shree-million circulation in the process of acquiring Combined Communications Corp., which publishes the Oakland, Calif., Tribune, and the Cincinnati Enquirer, in addition to operating seven tele-vision and 13 radio stations and several outdoor advertising firms.

The degree of corporate concentration of mass media ownership is described by Ben Bagdikian in the June Progressive magazine: "The fifty largest broadcast chains already have three-quarters of the audience. The fifty largest cable television companies have two-thirds of all subscribens. The fifty largest newspaper chains have more than two-thirds of all daily newspaper sales. Corporate newspaper chains aren't necessarily synonymous with bad journalism, though no newspaper generally regarded as great has ever been established by a corporate chain. But a group like Knight-Ridder 32 papers and almost 4 million circulation) has been known to buy an undistinguished property and up-

Mostly, however, chains rue bland, non-controversial organs, wherein care is taken anger not to arouse, excite, or disturb the reader. They may not do much good, hut they don't do much harm and they make pots of money for the stockholders.

What may change this is a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision endowing corporations with civil rights. Chief Justice Warren E. Burger said this is necessary lest corporate regulation be extended to corporations which print newsers and operate broadcasting stations.

The effect of the decision, however, is to invite corporate America to buy communications properties and use them as a way around the laws limiting corporate participation in politics.

How can a conglomerate like Western Pacific Industries, Inc., be prevented from inundeting the nation with propa-ganda if it is successful with its current takeover attempt of Houghton Mifflin, the hook publishing company Western Pacific can skip around the laws relating to political advertising merely by printing what it wants to say in book form, distributing the books. free or nearly so and caiming any intenference is a violation of the corporation's right to a free press. But the opportunities to do this effectively through book publishing are nothing compared to what comporation like GM could do by buying out a chain like Knight Ridder.

As it is, Americans are getting almost as much procorporation claptrap stuffed down theirs. Although nessmen have dominated and controlled the boards of trustees of most of our colleges and universities since the turn of the century, the drive is on to make these places more institutions of indoctrination. # Senator James Abourezk

By Richard Pyle WASHINGTON-

The retirement of Senator James Abourezk of South Dakota takes from the U.S. Senate its most freewheeling figure, a man who wook great delight in defying the stuffy traditions of that legislative body. It also removes from Washington the lawmaker who was the leading-if not the only-voice for the cause on Capitol Hill.

Abourezk, who is of Lebanese descent, complained frequently about the Israeli lobby" and its influence on members of the U.S. Congress. He said the United States is so committed to Israel that country is able to dictate the course of U.S. foreign policy in the Middle

Numerous foreign countries have their own champions in the Senate and House of Representatives. There are lawmakers who are identified with or speak on behalf of Tai-wan, Greece and the Greek South Cypriots, Nicaragua, Africa and Rhodesia, Black, Africa, Polend and

Korea. Anwar Sadat, as a result of his peace initiative and the Camp David agreements, has won friends for himself and for Egypt on Capitol Hill. And no individual country has more supporters in the Congress than Israel.

All of which makes Abou rezk's retirement from the Senate more significant. Unless next Tuesday's elec-sion produces one, there appears to be no legislator in either chamber of the Congress to replace the South Dakotan as an outspoken defender of the Arabs. The 47-yearold Abourezk announced early last year that he was fed up" with the Senate and insended to leave at the end of his term rather than seek reelection.

He said he was frustrated by the difficulty in getting things accomplished, and

Belgium's language headache

By Murray Seeger BRUSSELS

A motorist leaving Brussels on the main highway to Paris learns from a roadside sign that the next major town along. the way will be Bergen, 48 kilometers south. But the next sign tells him that just ahead is Mons. Mons and Bergen are different names for the same town. One is used in the part of Belgium known as Wallonia, where French is spoken, and the other is used in the part known as Flanders, where Flemish - essentially the same as Dutch - is spo-

The two regions are separated by a linguistic border that has existed throughout the 150 years of Belgian independence - and bedeviled Belgian political life from the beginning.

Last month, for the second time in five months, the government resigned in a dispute over the language question.

After 50 years of trying, the politicians had thought they were approaching a solution. The major parties had come up with a carefully crafted agreement that was thought to represent the interests of all 10 million Belgians.

Prime Minister Leo Tindemans, whose coalition government had given top priority to solving the problem, resigned for five days in June to force approval of what is called the Egmont Pact.

He resigned again when the Flemish wing of his Social. Christian Party balked at plans to implement the pact. Belgium has contained the seeds of separatism since 1830, when it declared its independence from the Netherlands. For the first century of modern Belgian history, the richer, more sophisticated French-speaking Walloons of the south dominated the poorer Flemings of the north and

The Francophones, as they are called in Belgium. moved into Brussels, which lies entirely within the Flemish region. They made Brussels French-speaking island and perpetuated the notion that all Belgians spoke French. In 1921, dual-lingualism was officially recognized, and in 1932 a law was enacted that made Flemish the official language in the north and French the official in the south. Brussels was designated as bilingual. Walloons dominated the government bureaucracy and business leadership until after World War II, when the balance of power began to shift. In the last 20 years, economic development has been more rapid in the north. Flemish Antwerp and Ghent, important port cities, developed into a major industrial region. The French-speaking south, which had depended on coal and steel for its wealth, went into a decline along with neighboring northeast France, Luxembourg and southwest Germany.

Flanders' population grew more rapidly than Wallonia's so that today the Flemings' make up 55 percent of the population and the Walloons 33 percent, the remainder being of other nationalities.

In each region the local language predominated and the minority language was hardly used. According to the Flemings, this meant that the French-speakers learned only French while the Flemings learned both in order to have a language of general use. Yet language has become such an emotional issue that many Flemings refuse to speak French at all and will turn to German or English to converse with foreigners.

On the other hand, Flemish families have been reluctant to let their children study French for fear that the young people will forget their culture. But the young people want to learn French or English because they are international languages, according to young Flemish writer.

Despite the cultural connection with their Dutch-speaking neighbors to the north, the Flemish are not interested in roll. having close ties to the Netherlands. There is a similar coolness

While Wallonia and Fine ders went their ways. Brussels developed into a multilingual city, spawning a local distact made up primarily of French but including English, Florida German and Yiddish Public sions are in two languages -Mons-Bergen, Anvers-Antwerpen, Brussel-Bruxelles. Many residents speak at least two languages. Policemen are lequired to know four: French. Flemish, English and German.

The major conflicts in the language issue have taken place on the periphery of the city, where the French-speaking community meets a ring of Flemish-speaking suburbs, and in national politics. In French-speaking Schaerbeek, one of the 19 communities that make up greater Bruseck, Mayor Roger Nois made name for himself two sears ago hy limiting to one the number of public counters in city hall where Flemish was spoken. French-speakers had five and coreigners two. On the other side of the city, in Overijse, the Flemish majority organized a campaign to persuade French-speakers to leave. The Flemings posted signs to intimidate the Walloom and tried to prevent them from attending a local community

French-speaking employees at the National Savings Bank went on strike, contending that an agreement to divide the staff on the basis of 52.5 per cent Flemish-speakers and 47.5 per cent Francophones had not been carried out. Actually, the breakdown was 53.7 per cent Flemish and 46.22 Francopho-

saudi press review

Saudi papers which commented editorially on the Baghdad summit referred to the active role that was played by Crown Prince Fahd in bridging gaps between various positions. "Okaz" said that the Saudi role "was not confined to sounding out other opinions but to supporting those that aim at greater Arab interests. Foreign Minister Prince Saudi Al-Faisal was very active during the preparatory meetings of the foreign. ministers and succeeded in defining the most acceptable attitude that should be taken to meet the dangers that face the Arabs. This explains the tour of some Arab states which was undertaken by Prince Saud before he went to Baghdad. The Arab summit is principally concerned with charting out a common streategy for the Arab states to deal with the situation, with all its dimensions, and consequences."

"Al-Jeziah" said that "even if there are differences in Arab positions, the summit has enormous potential for Arab power which could be mobilized for liberation."

"Al-Bilad" said that these present in Baghdad "were carefully following the energetic contacts that Prince Fahd was make ing which go to prove that whatever happens, the Kingdom shall always lead the Arab march towards the common goals and

The paper said that the Saudi attitude stems from a "profound belief that the Arab people are capable of occupying a prominent position in the world and to fight Zionist tyranny and other evil forces."

"Al-Medina" said that all the developments in the Arab world, before and after the October 1973 War "should only be viewed from the perspective of the Arab entity which united them and will always do so. There is no other alternative to a United Arab world," the paper said. "There is nothing worse than disunity."

"Al-Medina" discussed the Real Estate Development Fund, It said that when the fund was launched, the government promised borrowers to forefeit 20 per cent of the loan value "as a means of assisting the people to build more for themselves." The writer said that he was surprised to learn that the director of the fund says that there will be no foregoing of any of the loans. He said that this was not fair specially with regard to borrowers who had built homes for their own use and not to rent out. "These people deserve the original discount that the government of King Khaled was gracious enough to allow them."

Dealing with spiralling existers in Jeddah. "Al-Modine" said that "not only is the fare prohibitively high, but the taxt drivers are rude and often refuse to stop." The paper said that despite the large number of taxes in Jeddah, "the fares are high and the service is bad."

Discussing sacrificial animals slaughtered during the pil-grimage and which are then allowed to go to waste, a leading religious commentator said in "Al-Medina" that steps should be taken to make use of the animals-numbering several hundred thousand head. He proposed, in the absence of government plans at this stage, that a group of charitable organizations be formed to save the meat, the skins, and other use able parts for distribution to poor Muslims around the world

"Al-Rilled" said that "one pharmacy or two open at night is simply not enough for a large city like Jeddah," as precribed by the ministry of health.

The writer said that at present the number of pharmacies open at night is too small and it invariably happens that the pharmacy open on one night is located in the extreme end of the town. "There should be one in every locality."

Israel's attack on an American spy ship: conspiracy?

"Conspiracy of Silence: The Attack on the USS Liberty" By Anthony Pearson, Quartet Books, London, 1978.

By Bob Lebling

Washington Bureau WASHINGTON - "Conspiracy of Suence" is the first and only hook ever to appear on me USS Urberry incident in the it years since Israeli air and naval forces devastated the American spy-snip in internationai waters ouring the 1907 Middle East war.

The attack on the Liberty which israel claims was a case of "mistaken identity" — was the worst "peacetime" disaster in U.S. navai history, Some 34 crewmen died and 171 were wounded. The attack so angered U.S. military leaders at the time that the Joint Chiefs of Stati ordered a retaliatory air strike against the Israeli naval base at Haira — an order countermanded at the last minute by President Johnson,

And yet for all the official concern, media coverage of the attack was muted -- some say as a result of a CLA-imposed news olackout - and there was virtually no press follow-up or investigative reporting into reasons for the attack.

Unlike its relebrated sistership the Pueblo, the Liberty became the object of a 'Conspiracy of Silence" which is only now beginning to unravel thanks to the prohing of Anthony Pearson and a handful of others,

Pearson's book -- the outgrewth of a two-part article magazine in 1976 - is in many ways a remarkable and tantalizing work. It is surprising not only for the mere fact that it was published, but also for the amazing but believable conclusions it draws about the Liberty incident and its after-

Serious flaws Unfortunately, though, the book is seriously flawed in several respects, making it an easy target for critics anxious to dismiss its rather startling

The book gives the impression of being hastily written and poorly edited. It is replete with minor factual errors that at the very least serve to irritate the informed reader and could lead some to question Pearson's journalistic professio-

In addition, too much of the book is sheer padding. Pearson is at his best when he delves into the political and strategic background behind the Liherty incident or graphically describes the actual attack on the electronics intelligence ship. He is at his worst when he recounts his personal experiences in connection with the Liberty story - "adventures" that take up more than half the book and are related in a self-serving

James Bondish narrative fashion which tends to undercut the serious theme of his work.

But despite these flaws, Pearson's book is worth reading if only because of the new avenues of investigation he

Drawing on U.S. military and British intelligence sources including an unnamed Peotagon general and a mysterious Mi6 operative called 'Major McKenna' - Pearson constructs a fascinating strategic scenario for the Liberty incident, a scenario which if true would make the Israeli attack on the spy-ship far more significan: than a mere "footoon in history," and which would help explain the information blackout surrounding the inci-

Secret sub According to Pearson's sources, the Liberty had a dual mission when it took up its position off the Sinai coast. In addition to gathering surface intelligence by monitoring battlefield communications, the ship was serving as liaison for a U.S. nuclear submarine armed with Polaris missiles, oo covert attachment to the American Sixth Fleet in the Medi-

The submarine, identified hy Pearson as the USS Andrew Jackson, lay several hundred feet below the Liberty, under special orders to maintain radio sileoce and hold its position unless instructed by President Johnson to ahort its mission

The Andrew Jackson's presence off the Egyptiao coast was partly a response to entry to two Soviet Echo-class missile subs into the Mediterranean earlier in the month.

But it also had another mising Pearson claims, in unlikely event that Israel found itself losing the war.

The EQ CONS spy ship, shown here before the attack

U.S. intelligence experts be-lieved Israel had a 90 per cent chance of emerging the victor in the 1967 conflict.

"But there was still ten per cent of doubt," Pearson quotes a U.S. general as saying, "and that ten per cent contained the possibility that if the Israelis were pushed with their backs to the sea they would operate their Doomsday plan to launch a fullscale missile attack against Baghdad, Cairo and Damascus. Some people in the NSA (the super-secret National Security Ageocy) figured this could even be a limited nuclear attack as the Israelis did have the capability," the Soviet Union was aware ot Israel's plans to launch missues from silos in the Negev in the event of an impending deteat, toe Kremito had waroed the United States that it Israel ever did escalate the war to loclude the bombardment of civilian targets, Soviet tighternombers would intervene.

Doomsday scenario To avoid toe possibility of a superpower clash, the United States worked out a conugency plan with the Russians, Pearson

Quoting the American gene-ral again: "It the war moved in any direction towards missile escalation we, as (guardians) of Israel, would personally knock out all the Israeli missile sites and bomber assault bases and even airborne bomoers to prevent the Soviets having to do it and to avoid controntation.

This was the mission of the USS Andrew Jackson, the "shadow" of the ill-fated Li-

Pearson says the Israelis were unaware of the presence of the nuclear submarine. They attacked its haisoo vessel, the Liberry, to preveot it from monitoring the Israeli invasion of the West Bank and its plans to overrun the Golao Heights.

According to Pearson, the United States had a secret agreement with Israel limiting the war to Egyptian front. Ame- tive story.

rican policymakers were hoping that an Israeli victory in Sinai would help unseat the "uncooperative" president of Egypt, Gamal Abdul Nasser.

But the United States had given assurances to Jordan's, King Hussein that Israel would not attempt to seize the West Bank and Arab Jerusalem.

The Israelis decided, however, that if they could capture the West Bank quickly before the United States had time to press for a ceasefire, then the Americans would be presented with a fait accompli that they could do little to reverse.

The Liberty, with its sensi-tive electronic monitoring equip-ment, could give the U.S. administratioo ample warning of a thrust into the West Bank, and so General Dayan made the fateful decision to destroy the ship.

Mistaken identity? The Israelis only called off their attack when challenged by U.S. jets from a Sixth Fleet carrier, Pearson says. At this point they decided to claim the attack was a "mistake," and that Israeli spotters had thought the clearly marked American vessel was an Egyptian freighter called the El Quseir.

The entire attack. Pearson says, was filmed, via periscope and zoom lens, hy the submarine Andrew Jackson. This classified film footage he says is the real reason why U.S. policymakers have never believed Israel's explanation for the Pearson's thesis is a fascinating one and deserving of further investigation by the press. It is regrettable that the book is so llawed in other respects that it runs the risk of being ignored.

But at least "Conspiracy of Silence" has broken the ice surrounding the Liberty affair. Now it is up to serious investigative jouroalists, particularly in the United States to press the case even further and hopefully come up with the defini-

Indira blames opposition for violence in campaign

Nov. 4 (AP) — Former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, hoping to re-enter India's parliament in a by-election here, said Saturday that the ruling Janata Party has brought outsiders to provoke violence in this oor-mally quiet rural district.

"in some places where I was stooed, it was obvious that they were out local people," she told reporters on the eve of Sunday's voting.

Earlier, the national ruling party accused Mrs. Gandhi's supporters, including among them local police forces, of unleasing violence which left one young woman dead and scores of Janata workers and reporters injured.

Scattered clashes between campaign workers of the opposing sides were reported Saturday in remote villages of the sprawling district of coffee plantations and forests 1,100 miles south of New Delhi. Injuries were described as oumemous hut minor.
